Cover with aluminium foil and secure with kitchen string. Companies cant alter or remove reviews from ProductReview.com.au. Mandi Newcastle I am devistated it has been discontinued. The only couple of not so positive things about it are the little rubber feet came off. Not that it affects it being able to be used. Plus the base has warped a slight bit. But again does not affect the use of the cooker. Date Purchased Apr 2013 Like Share More Similar opinion. Write a review on ProductReview.com.au ! Now love it as i have a gastric banding and is the only way I can Eat red meat and being a single mother it is a great size to do extra to freeze for myself when kids go to their fathers. but my bowl split in half while doing a beef gravy casserole. Used it to cook some beef cheeks and vegetables, which it did well. When I washed it there was a giant crack across the bowl, which went all the way through. No word on whether the obvious technical problem has been fixed. Cooked well Takes a lot of space. Obviously the bowl is not up to standard. Compare all Yvonne Hulbert Macleay Island Brisbane 2 reviews We have only cooked ham and pea soup, lamb shanks, chicken legs in bulk in tomato sauce dishes in this no burning and no problems until I emptied it out today to clean and the bottom has inside cracks around three corners. These are long cracks which do not appear on the outside of the bowl. On picking the bowl up I think I hear a slight creak too. I have been careful about not putting. Read more cold water into a hot bowl this has not happened here. The cracks must have occurred during yesterdays pea and ham soup cooking.

I left the soup to cool down in the bowl overnight outside the fridge! My concern is, if I use it again will the bottom fall out! I dont think I should use it again sadly. I will phone Breville tomorrow to see how much a new bowl will cost and if there is a warrantee on it. Sadly, ours is just out of warrantee. Isnt that the way! Question; does this only happen to cornered bowls. Do round bowls last longer Size, even cooking and good temperature control. Its now 4 5 years old, but the bowl showed signs of cracking within the first couple of years. And I love the large size, but unless you cook 2kgs of meat plus veges, its almost too big and stuff burns. The rectangle shape also means that the corners are harder to clean. Not a major issue, but Ill be looking for an oval shape next time. Write a review on ProductReview.com.au ! Karen Cope Victoria Perfect beef casserole which fed 12 adults.

Like Share More 2 answers Spider 3 days ago Hi there, I have a Breville BSC560 which you can remove the pan from within the slow cooker and sear your product on the gas or electric stove before slow cooking. The inner pan is made from a metal, aluminium I think and not ceramic. Im not sure about the BSC400 as Im not sure what material the inner pan is. I know on one of my earlier Breville slow cookers, that the inner pan was made of some sort of ceramic and was not suitable for searing, however the newer BSC560 you certainly can. Hope this helps.

Most food dehydrators keep temperature constant, causing case hardening food dried on the surface with remaining moisture still trapped inside this moisture differential increases the risk of bacterial, yeast and mould growth. The best dehydrator at CrazySales creates a hyperwave fluctuation and varies heat through the drying cycle, eliminating case hardening and delivering dried food without any residual moisture, dry enough to be powdered. The Maxkon fruit dehydrator is a bestselling food dehydrator worldwide for good reason it is made to a high engineering quality and gives reliable performance, time after time. Its case does not produce any harmful fumes while in use, unlike cheaper styrene dehydrators. The thermostat ranges from quite low to high temperatures and provides fine control on temperature and precision drying. The range is low enough to preserve living nutrients but high enough to make meat jerky safely. Buy it today and enjoy your homemade healthy snacks. We are such happy customers I am happy using it for my green smoothie everyday. The delivery was very quick. I recommend it for everyone to have one.
